The Butler eBanner

Newsletter of the Butler Center for Arkansas Studies

Summer 2018

Art Exhibitions

Sept. 14-Nov. 24, 2018 Butler Center Underground Gallery

Amily Miori—Au Pair Don't Care
The exhibition will feature oil paintings based on the original (and sometimes disturbing) storylines of fairytales.
Each painting has a summary of the original story and the modern version as told through the words of the rebellious and irreverent "au pair" storyteller.

Sept. 18-Dec. 29, 2018 Butler Center Loft Gallery

The Arkansas Blues: Photographs by Cheryl Cohen and Louis Guida. In collaboration with ACANSA Arts Festival, these black-and-white photographs by Cheryl Cohen and Louis Guida, on loan from the Arkansas Arts Center, document blues musicians playing in Arkansas during the 1970s. This documentary project by Cohen and Guida became the foundation of the University of Arkansas at Pine Bluff Blues Project; these photographs were part of the earlier exhibition Old Roots, New Directions: Arkansas Blues Today.

Legacies & Lunch (noon-1 p.m.)

Wed., Sept. 5

CALS Main Library Darragh Center
Brooks Blevins will discuss his book A History of the Ozarks, Volume 1: The Old Ozarks, the first in a trilogy on the history of the region that includes most of the southern half of Missouri, much of northern Arkansas, and some of northeastern Oklahoma and southeastern Kansas.

Wed., Oct. 3

CALS Main Library Darragh Center
Author and professor Mark Spencer will discuss his book A Haunted
Love Story: The Ghosts of the Allen House in Monticello, focusing on the history of the house; the paranormal folklore associated with the house going back to the 1950s; his family's experiences as residents; and recent paranormal investigations.

Arkansas Sounds

Fri., Aug. 10, 7:00 p.m.

CALS Ron Robinson Theater
The Roots of American Music
Concert—$10
An all-star acoustic band of Danny
Dozier, Tim Crouch, Irl Hess, Ken Loggains, and Gary Gazaway traces the roots and branches of American

More events on page 10

David O. Dodd Extension Homemakers Club Collection Now Open

ome Demonstration Clubs were founded during the early twentieth century as part of the U.S. Department of Agriculture Cooperative Extension Service. The focus of the clubs was the education of America's farm families. The clubs provided agricultural demonstration programs for men and home demonstration programs for women.

Programs for women were meant to demonstrate improved methods for household responsibilities so farm families could improve their living conditions. Club presentations dealt with various aspects of home improvement such as gardening, canning, sewing, health and nutrition, gerontology, money management, and voter education. After World War II, the organization's focus evolved to include programs for younger women, urban women, and working women.

The first Arkansas club, a canning club for girls in Mabelvale (Pulaski County), was organized by Emma Archer in January 1912. Clubs in Arkansas, now part of the Arkansas Extension Homemakers Council, have also served the larger community. As supporters of the 4-H program, the Arkansas Council of Home Demonstration Clubs raised funds in 1938 to build a dormitory on the University of Arkansas campus in Fayetteville for 4-H program girls attending the university; the project Cont. on page 2

Better Homes Club scrapbook; 1930.

Charles E. Wade Worthen Bank Collection Now Open

he Charles E. Wade Worthen Bank Collection contains documents, photographs, and memorabilia collected by Charles E. Wade during his forty-six-year career with Worthen Bank and Trust Company. The bulk of the collection, which covers the years 1922 to 1977, consists of photographs accumulated during the company's expansion to include first drive-through teller windows and then to offer branch banking, a process that Wade spearheaded.

Charles E. Wade was born in Little Rock on February 20, 1920, the son of Harlan and Ruth Wade. He graduated from what is now Little Rock Central High School in 1938 and worked briefly at Fones Brothers hardware, before joining Worthen Bank in June 1940.

After serving in World War II, Wade re-joined the Worthen organization. The collection includes a letter from bank vice president L. E. Dishongh asking Wade to confirm his intention to return to the company.

Although a portion of the collection pre-dates Wade's time with Worthen, most items were accumulated during his work managing the com-Cont. on page 2 Cont. from Homemakers Club, p. 1 was completed in 1951.

The David O. Dodd Extension Homemakers Club was formed in Mabelvale in the 1920s. The collection held by the Butler Center contains nineteen boxes of organizational records for the club consisting mostly of scrapbooks and pamphlets. The scrapbooks were created and maintained by club secretaries and cover most years between 1930 and 2013. The bulk of the pamphlets are club yearbooks and secretaries' record books, and cover the same time period.

The collection is available in the Research Room of the Bobby L. Roberts Library of Arkansas History & Art, and the finding aid can be accessed here.

Cont. from Worthen Bank, p. 1 pany's new business development and expansion during the 1960s and 1970s. The collection also includes both formal and informal photographs of Worthen Bank employees, officers, and directors.

Of particular interest are photographs recording the clearing of downtown property by the Central Little Rock Urban Renewal Project in the mid-1960s. Worthen acquired a large portion of the cleared land for the construction of its new headquarters building. This building, at 200 West Capitol, is today the Bank of America Financial Center.

Wade retired from Worthen Bank in March 1986 as a senior vice president. Following retirement, he became executive director of the Arkansas State Golf Association. Wade died on June 20, 2010, at the age of ninety. The collection, MSS.11.73, is available in the Research Room of the Roberts Library, and the finding aid is available online here">here.

Aerial view of the block including 200 West Capitol after clearing by the Central Little Rock Urban Renewal Project. Worthen Bank purchased the block in about 1965 to build its new headquarters. The headquarters building later became the Bank of America Financial Center.

Keeping Up with Arkansas

By Guy Lancaster, editor of the Encyclopedia of Arkansas History & Culture

ometimes, I wish I could just make time stand still. You see, the more entries we have on the Encyclopedia of Arkansas History & Culture, the more time we have to spend making sure everything is up to date. Most recently, Bill Clinton published a novel co-written with James Patterson, so I had to make sure that was mentioned in our entry on the former president. The Arkansas Women's Hall of Fame recently announced its inductees for 2018, and thus I not only added those names to our entry on the Hall of Fame but also added a line acknowledging this for every woman on whom we already had an entry. As I write this, the Miss Arkansas Pageant is about to begin, so I'll be keeping an eye out for the winner's name, to add to our entry on Miss Arkansas.

I subscribe to a lot of Arkansas-related RSS feeds, and in my office, I have stacks of newspapers I am slowly going through, looking for any information relevant to entries we might have. But it's not just the content of the entries that needs updating on a regular basis. As our readers know, each entry has a bibliography of relevant material at the end, and we work to keep those updated, too. So when books and journals arrive here at the Butler Center, I scan them for any content relevant to our entries. I also keep an eye out for new dissertations on relevant subjects or good newspaper write-ups. And despite all this work, we do still occasionally miss news on a particular place or person, just because there is so much to follow.

That's what I mean when I say I wish occasionally that I could stop time from going forward. Just let me get through the entries we have in progress, please, before going and doing something new. But I know it can't be—and besides, while it might be convenient for me, it would halt some wonderful developments in the works. For example, El Dorado last year inaugurated the Murphy Arts District, a huge development aimed at revitalizing the community, and breweries keep popping up all over the state. Do I want to stop that from happening? No! And I'd be rather the hypocrite if I asked people to stop producing new works of history on the state.

I guess we'll keep on, then. At some point, though, the EOA is going to be so big that keeping it up to date is going to be a full-time job. So have you considered making a donation toward our efforts? If so, click here and type "Encyclopedia of Arkansas" under Other in the section that says "Apply My Gift To."

A Word from the Center

David Stricklin, Director of the Butler Center

ur most excellent parent organization, the Central Arkansas Library System, has undergone a major redo of its website. It's been a major effort, and it's taken a long time, and it's not all finished. But it's finished enough that a lot of people are having a good time knocking around on it and seeing what it has to offer. You can see in this eBanner some manifestations of the new CALS logo and other branding elements. And you can see some uses of "Library Square," which is the new name for the five buildings making up what we used to call the CALS Main Library Campus. "Library Square" will get a lot of use. For instance, the five art galleries the Butler Center manages are now "The Galleries at Library Square." You'll hear more about all of these things as time marches on. And when you come see us, which we hope you do soon and often, you'll start to see new signage, which is on the way.

But the CALS website you can check out right now at www.cals.org. And there are some very cool features to try out. Just a few, which you can find under the Discover tab, will put some truly wondrous stuff at your fingertips. One is "Search CALS Catalog," at https://cals.bibliocommons.com/. That gets you not only to the vast offerings of books to check out but also reading recommendations and a panoply of other resources and services. CALS is a powerhouse in offering things to enrich people's lives. It's nothing short of staggering. Also under Discover, if you click on https://arstudies.contentdm. oclc.org/digital/, you can get to the letters, diaries, photographs, and scads of other items in the Butler Center's collections of unpublished research materials and those of our partners from the University of Arkansas at Little Rock's Center for Arkansas History and Culture. It's a pretty amazing portal used by everybody from kids doing school projects to the BBC. You can also check out what's happening at the Galleries at Library Square notice how I said that right?—and get information on the Butler Center's latest art exhibitions and events. That's all at https://cals.org/butler-center-galleries/. And again, still under Discover, you can find some remarkable posts about events and other cool and important things at https://cals.org/blog/. Under the Events tab, you can peruse the offerings of our Arkansas Sounds concert series and other happenings around the system. Under Visit Us, you can get the lowdown on where we are, how to get here, where to park, and so on. It's all pretty great, and, as I say, this is just a bit of it.

More is coming online all the time, including a revamp of the Butler Center's own website. Nathan James, who is one of two CALS deputy executive directors, and his colleagues and the good folks in North Little Rock at Few have worked very hard on all of this. We're proud to be working with them. So, check it out. Get connected. We've got a lot for you to sink your digital teeth into, but also a lot of things to come to in person (as you can see in these pages), a lot of items you can hold in your hands, a lot to discover, and a lot that will surprise you. Hang on to your hat!

Speaking of CALS and advances of various sorts—and this is one of those mundane things that turn out to be kind of important—I've been taking just about every opportunity to let people

The Butler eBanner
is the quarterly electronic newsletter of the Butler Center
for Arkansas Studies,
a department of the Central Arkansas Library System.

Mailing address

100 Rock St. Little Rock, AR 72201
Physical address
Bobby L. Roberts Library of Arkansas History & Art
Library Square
401 President Clinton Ave.
Little Rock, AR 72201
501.320.5700 • arkinfo@cals.org
www.butlercenter.org

Ali Welky: Editor Mike Keckhaver: Designer

Summer 2018

know that we have a new(ish) parking deck. It has the same rates and the same discounts as our surface lot, the one that faces the Main Library between Second Street and the back of the Roberts Library (formerly the Arkansas Studies Institute building, which we'll keep saying for a while). You enter the CALS parking deck from Rock Street, the street that goes between Main and the west side of the Roberts Library (formerly the Arkansas Studies Institute-but you knew that). If you come to an event at Library Square (formerly the Main Library campus), and if you park in the deck, you will get a discount that might make the whole time free. And this is all on top of the City-run River Market Parking deck across River Market Avenue from the east end of Library Square (formerly...well, you get the idea). So, plenty of parking. Come on down!

Thanks to these sponsors of the Butler Center's monthly Arkansas Sounds Concert Series

... Butler Center Events in the Spotlight

Legacies & Lunch in May welcomed Holly Hope of the Arkansas Historic Preservation Program discussing the mixed masonry buildings of rock mason Silas Owens of Twin Groves.

Arkansas Sounds' John Miller, music critic Anthony DeCurtis, and "Queen of Rockabilly" Wanda Jackson are pictured here at the talk Jackson gave at the Arkansas Literary Festival in April about her autobiography: Every Night Is Saturday Night: A Country Girl's Journey to the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame.

In April, Sounds in the Stacks featured Dogtown Ukulele playing at the CALS Terry Library.

In June, Legacies & Lunch featured a panel discussion led by LaVerne Bell-Tolliver, who was the first African American student to attend Forest Heights Junior High in Little Rock. She was joined by Pinkie Thompson and Kathleen Bell, who desegregated Pulaski Heights Junior High. Bell-Tolliver's book The First Twenty-Five: An Oral History of the Desegregation of Little Rock's Public Junior High Schools was published by the University of Arkansas Press this year.

Arkansas Sounds in May screened the documentary Arkansas Wildman and then welcomed the Legendary Pacers for a tribute to the late Sonny Burgess, who had led the band for many decades.

In June, Sounds in the Stacks included a celebration of the fifth anniversary of the Millie Brooks Library. The featured band was Recovery, with Saboor Salaam on saxophone and Ken Richardson on keyboards and vocals.

In a joint effort of Arkansas
Sounds, the Clinton Foundation, and Arkansas Governor's School,
Epiphany "Big Piph" Morrow gave a one-hour presentation in June in the CALS Ron Robinson
Theater designed to inspire the 475 students in attendance by showing the benefits of using music to advance leadership goals.

In June, Arkansas Sounds celebrated the storied history of KAAY, The Mighty 1090, with a panel discussion (top photo) and a concert. From left to right are: panelist moderator Tom Wood (in red shirt) with original KAAY onair personalities Clyde Clifford, David B. Treadway, Sonny Martin, Barry McCorkindale, and Bob Steel. The KAAY tribute concert (bottom photo) featured musicians Barbara Raney and Buck McArthur; they are pictured here performing "Cindy's Crying."

July's Legacies & Lunch featured Rachel Patton of Preserve Arkansas presenting "Arkansas's Most Endangered Historic Places: 2018."

The Butler Center's Kim Sanders gave a talk at the Faulkner County Library in Conway about the incarceration of Japanese Americans in Arkansas during World War II.

In April, Japanese American Memorial Pilgrimages organized a tour that included the Butler Center's Education in Exile exhibition. Kimiko Marr (left) of the organization is pictured with the Butler Center's Kim Sanders and Kara Miyagishima (right) from the National Park Service, which supports the Butler Center's series of four exhibitions on Japanese incarceration in Arkansas.

Kim Sanders was busy installing the Matter of Mind and Heart exhibition in advance of the opening at the July 13 Second Friday Art Night. The exhibition is on view in the Concordia Hall Gallery through December 29.

As the Arkansas Arts Center is closing for renovations, it is placing artwork in other venues when possible instead of moving it to storage. The atrium of the Roberts Library will be the temporary home of two parts of Wendy Maruyama's Tag Project, which consists of 120,000 replicas of the paper identification tags that internees were forced to wear when they were being relocated to incarceration centers. The tags are grouped into ten sculptural bundles and suspended from the ceiling, with each bundle representing one of the camps (the two camps in Arkansas, Rohwer and Jerome, are represented here). They evoke a powerful sense of the humiliation endured by the internees and the sheer numbers of those displaced. The Butler Center's art administrator Colin Thompson is shown here installing the sculptures with Arts Center staff members.

In July, Sounds in the Stacks at the McMath Library showcased the jazz piano and vocals of R&B stylist Tim Anthony. Eighteen-year-old library patron Daquarius Chism, who raps as "Lil DQ," joined him to freestyle a rap about how much he misses his uncle; this was Lil DQ's debut in public performance.

C A L S

BUTLER CENTER FOR ARKANSAS STUDIES

Displayed in the Butler Center's exhibition A Legacy of Brewers (on view through Oct. 27), The Boys (1956, oil on canvas) is thought to be the last painting by Adrian Brewer of his grandsons Grimsley, Larry, and Louis Graham, who posed with the painting at July's 2FAN. Also on display is the paint-covered palette Brewer used to create the portrait of the boys.

News from Butler Center Books

New Arkansas Titles for Fall

his fall, Butler Center Books will publish three new titles: Arkansas Backstories: Quirks, Characters, and Curiosities of the Natural State by former state tourism director Joe David Rice; Mountain Feds: Arkansas Unionists and the Peace Society by James J. Johnston; and Remembering Ella: A 1912 Murder and Mystery in the Arkansas Ozarks by Ozarks historian Nita Gould.

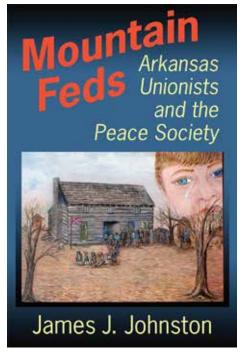

Arkansas is a complex place—part Old South, part Old West, and part traditional hill country-that has shared an amazing array of people and products with the world over the years. Even so, much of what makes Arkansas so special remains largely unrecognized. To help right this wrong, Arkansas Backstories highlights the lesser-known aspects of America's twenty-fifth state. The short essays in this handsomely illustrated book will offer surprises for even the most dedicated and devoted students of the state. How many readers, for instance, realize that the first African American presidential candidate was from Arkansas? Or that an Arkansan candidate formally challenged John F. Kennedy for the Democratic Party's nomination in 1960? Or that there's good evidence that Abraham Lincoln lived for a time in northeast Arkansas, chopping wood for a plantation owner?

Few readers may be aware of the connections between Arkansas and the Texas fight for independence. Or the ties between organized crime and Hot Springs. Or the fact that the state came very close to having a huge national park in the heart of the Ouachitas. Or that the world's first international UFO conference was held in Fort Smith.

These and other captivating topics are what make Arkansas Backstories an essential addition to every coffee table in the state. The book will delight any and all interested in Arkansas—one of the country's most fascinating states. Arkansas Backstories (covering topics starting with letters A through L) will be available in September, and the companion volume—More Arkansas Backstories (letters M through Z)—will be out in the spring of 2019 ($39.95 hardcover).

Mountain Feds: Arkansas Unionists and the Peace Society by James J. Johnston is the fascinating story of the Arkansas farmers and hill people from northern Arkansas who opposed the state's secession from the Union.

Slavery was not a big part of the local economy in northern Arkansas. In resistance to secession and to fighting for the Confederacy, residents of the area formed secret organizations—usually known as the Peace Society—and formed their own leadership. Increased pressure from Richmond in the fall of 1861 for the Arkansas government to provide more Confederate soldiers pressed Arkansas's yeomen farmers to enlist but only provided more incentive for the men to join the Peace Society (later known as the Union League).

Many communities throughout the state at this time forged home protective units or vigilance committees to protect themselves from slave uprisings and what they saw as federal invasion. Unionist mountaineers did the same, but their home protection organizations were secret because they were instead seeking protection from their secessionist neighbors and the state's Confederate government.

In November 1861, the Peace Society was first uncovered in Clinton (Van Buren County) by the secessionist element, which rapidly formed vigilante committees to arrest and interrogate the suspects. The news and subsequent arrests spread to adjoining counties from the Arkansas River to the Missouri border. In most cases, the local militia was called out to handle the arrests and put down the rumored uprising.

While some Peace Society members fled to Missouri or hid in the woods, others were arrested and marched to Little Rock, where they were forced to join the Confederate army. Leaders who were prominent in the Peace Society recruited and led companies in Arkansas and Missouri Unionist regiments, returning to their homes to bring out loyalist refugees or to suppress Confederate guerrillas. A few of these home-grown leaders assumed leadership positions in civil government in the last months of the war, with the effects of their actions lingering for years to come. Mountain Feds will be available in September ($39.95 hardcover; $24.95 paperback).

Remembering Ella: A 1912 Murder and Mystery in the Arkansas Ozarks offers an intriguing story by Ozarks historian and preservation enthusiast Nita Gould.

In November 1912, popular and pretty eighteen-year-old Ella Barham was raped, murdered, and dismembered in broad daylight near her home in rural Boone County, Arkansas. The brutal crime sent shockwaves through the Ozarks and made national news. Authorities swiftly charged a neighbor, Odus Davidson, with the crime. Locals were determined that he be convicted, and threats of mob violence ran so high that he had to be jailed in another county to ensure his safety. But was there enough evidence to prove his guilt? If so, had he acted alone? What was his motive?

An examination of the murder of Ella Barham, and the trial of her alleged killer, opens a window into the meaning of community and justice during a time when politicians and judges sought to professionalize justice, moving from local hangings to state-run executions. Davidson's appeal has been cited as a precedent in numerous court cases and his brief was reviewed by the lawyers in Georgia who prepared Leo Frank's appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court in 1915.

Author Nita Gould is a descendant of the Barhams of Boone County and Ella Barham's cousin. Her tenacious pursuit to create an authoritative account of the community, the crime, and the subsequent legal battle spanned nearly fifteen years. Gould weaves local history and short biographies into her narrative and also draws on the official case files, hundreds of newspaper accounts, and personal Barham family documents. Remembering Emma reveals the truth behind an event that has been a staple of local folklore for more than a century and still intrigues people from around the country. Remembering Ella will be published in October ($24.95 paperback).

*******

Butler Center Books, which publishes around six books a year, is funded solely through sales of its books and donations from the public. Donations may be made through www.cals.org by clicking on the CALS Foundation tab. Butler Center Books has more than fifty titles in print and available to order. For a complete list, click here. Books are available in bookstores, including the Bookstore at Library Square (formerly River Market Books & Gifts) in Little Rock at (501) 918-3093; from major online retailers; and from our distributor at (800) 621-2736. Your purchases as well as your donations will help ensure that we continue to bring you the best in Arkansas history. For purchasing information, click here.

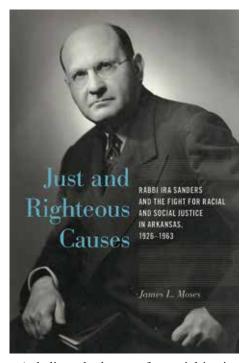

The University of Arkansas Press will also present several notable Arkansas-related titles this fall, including It's All Done Gone: Arkansas Photographs from the Farm Security Administration Collection, 1935–1943 (out in August) and Just and Righteous Causes: Rabbi Ira Sanders and the Fight for Racial and Social Justice in Arkansas, 1926–1963 (out in November). Butler Center Books and the University of Arkansas Press share the mission of publishing works on the history and culture of Arkansas and the South.

In 1935, a fledging government agency embarked on a project to photograph Americans hit hardest by the Great Depression. Over the next eight years, the photographers of the Farm Security Administration (FSA) captured nearly a quarter of a million images of tenant farmers and sharecroppers in the South, migrant workers in California, and laborers in northern industries and urban slums.

Of the roughly one thousand FSA photographs taken in Arkansas, approximately two hundred were selected for inclusion in this volume. Portraying workers picking cotton for five cents an hour, families evicted from homes for their connection with the Southern Tenant Farmers' Union, and the effects of flood and drought that cruelly exacerbated the impact of economic disaster, these remarkable black-and-white images from Ben Shahn, Arthur Rothstein, Dorothea Lange, Walker Evans, Russell Lee, and other acclaimed photographers illustrate the extreme hardships that so many Arkansans endured throughout this era. These powerful photographs continue to resonate, providing a glimpse of life in Arkansas that will captivate readers as they connect to a shared past.

A dedicated advocate for social justice long before the term entered everyday usage, Rabbi Ira Sanders began striving against the Jim Crow system of racial segregation soon after he arrived in Little Rock from New York in 1926. Sanders, who led Little Rock's Temple B'nai Isifty-five classroom teachers and administrators from forty-four schools around the state participated in the 2018 Summer Seminar at the CALS Main Library on June 7–8. Sponsored by the Butler Center and the Arkansas Humanities Council, this year's seminar, Mapping the Arkansas Territory, Then & Now, provided participants with primary documents and teaching resources to use during the upcoming 2019 Bicentennial of the Arkansas Territory.

Cont. on page 11

Butler Center Summer Seminar 2018: Mapping the Arkansas Territory, Then & Now

Highlights included presentations by nine noted historians and history educators, site visits to Historic Arkansas Museum and Pinnacle Mountain State Park, and hands-on sessions using Google Earth to analyze historical maps in the Butler Center collection and using smartphones to turn historical letters and journals into student podcasts. The seminar culminated with demonstrations by a five-student team from Cave City High School in Sharp and Independence Counties showing several mapping, oral history, and webpage projects students can create and publish on the Butler Center's Arkansas History Hub website for teachers. Student-produced content will be added here along with the primary documents, seminar presentations, lesson plans, and teaching resources throughout the coming year.

Professor Andrew Milson from the University of Texas-Arlington opened the summer seminar with research from his book forthcoming from the University of Arkansas Press on five early Arkansas explorers and journalists, Arkansas Travelers: Geographies of the Backcountry Past, 1804-1834. Milson shared his maps tracing the routes of Dunbar-Hunter, Nuttall, Schoolcraft, Bell-Long, and Featherstonhaugh and analysis of their commentary on the physical and human geography of their travels. Milson, who specializes in historical geography and geography education, also led breakout sessions during the second day of the seminar demonstrating ArcView GIS mapping software for student use.

The next sessions introduced the history of settlement in the Arkansas Territory at two ends of the ancient road traversing Arkansas from northeast to southwest, dubbed much later "the Southwest Trail." Joan Gould, research consultant with Preservation Matters, shared maps, family letters, and land deeds from General Land Office records documenting settlement in the Strawberry River Valley a decade before and after Arkansas became a territory in her presentation "Lining Up Historical Data Points & Erasing Boundaries: The Forgotten Territorial History of Lawrence County."

Josh Williams, historian and curator at Historic Washington State Park, shared a photojournalism project park rangers take to school classrooms to inspire local students to find history not far from their homes and school. The slide show "Drive-By History: Red River Settlement & Road Network in Territorial Arkansas" captures glimpses of names of early families and former thriving settlements throughout the original Hempstead County, now revealed in road signs, highway markers, and street names scattered around the southwest corner of Arkansas.

In keeping with the tradition started by Kay Bland, the first education outreach coordinator for the Butler Center, every summer seminar includes a "sitebased learning experience." This year's trip was to "Mamelle Mountain"—as Pinnacle Mountain was first called—a site explored and described by naturalist Thomas Nuttall in 1819 and geologist George Featherstonhaugh in 1834. Park interpreter Matthew Friant passed around photographs of plants, trees, birds, animals, and rock forms that caught the eye of Nuttall two hundred years prior to the group's box-lunch picnic. Teachers learned how students could turn the journal entries of the early travelers into a shot list of close-up details and wideangle views on a photo documentary field trip.

After settling into overnight lodging made possible by funds from the Arkansas Humanities Council, the seminar resumed at a second site visit: Historic Arkansas Museum, formerly known as the Arkansas Territorial Restoration. Director Sewanee Bennett guided teachers through HAM's exhibition We Walk in Two Worlds, featuring artifacts and oral histories from the three historic tribal nations in Arkansas: the Quapaw, Caddo, and Osage. Curator Victoria Garrett then shared her recent research on foodways traditions of the different cultural groups inhabiting colonial and territorial Arkansas: Native American, Colonial French and Spanish, and the first wave of Scots-

Cave City High School student team (left to right): Kendall Townsley, Amelia Counts, Ralynnda Martin, Curtis Jones, and Joseph Hutchison

Irish, German, and African Americans. A buffet dinner followed, based on related recipes and ingredients, prepared by Dave Williams from Dave's Place.

The evening presentation by Professor Conevery Bolton Valencius of Boston College focused on life in the Territory for early inhabitants, more pointedly the "Dangers of the Territory: Ague, Earthquakes, and other Health Hazards." Valencius shared information from her two acclaimed books, The Health of the Country: How American Settlers Understood Themselves and Their Land (2002) and The Lost History of the New Madrid Earthquakes (2013).

Day two of the seminar began with a follow-up to the previous night's exhibition by Professor Joe Key, chair of the History Department at Arkansas State University. Using historical maps and treaty excerpts in his presentation "Conflicting Ideas of Land: US Treaties of Cession with Native Americans in Arkansas: 1803–1833," Key illustrated the sequence of treaties made and then broken that turned into the final chapters in Arkansas for the three tribal nations.

Participants then rotated through two breakout sessions for hands-on workshops for student projects. While Dr.

Summer seminar participants. Photo by Chris Lacefield Photography

Milson led "Using Google Earth Maps to Follow Early Arkansas Explorers" in the Main Library Computer Lab, George West and Butler Center intern Morgan Guzman trained teachers in "Using Smartphones to Create Historical Podcasts." Guzman, a graduate student in public history at UA Little Rock with an Arkansas teacher's license in social studies, developed the lesson plans for the session on how to analyze the historical document, read the passage to communicate meaning and emotion, record the podcast in study pairs, and transfer the podcast to the Butler Center's Arkansas History Hub website for teachers.

To encourage participants to develop podcasts and mapping projects for the territorial bicentennial with their students in the coming year, the seminar finished with the presentation by the Cave City High School student team (see page 8). The five-member team shared its research and documentary work on the travels of Henry Rowe Schoolcraft across the Strawberry, Spring, and Eleven Point Rivers on his return from a journey into the White River country in 1819.

Using still and drone video photography to document the sites described in Schoolcraft's journal, the students wrote their own journal entries on each location, recorded oral history interviews with local historians, wrote and produced a documentary video on Schoolcraft, and created a webpage to share their findings.

The student presenters included: Amelia Counts, webmaster; Joseph Hutchinson, fieldwork research; Curtis Jones, fieldwork research; Ralynnda March, photographer/videographer; and Kendall Townsley, drone pilot & video.

The Cave City student project, which was started in early March, was facilitated by Cave City principal Marc Walling, librarian Tara Ball, and history teacher Julie Sandy and was mentored by Blake Perkins, professor of history at Williams Baptist University in Walnut Ridge and a co-author with Joan Gould of the research on early Lawrence County, funded in part by the Arkansas Humanities Council.

Awards and Honors for the Butler Center

he 77th Annual Conference of the Arkansas Historical Association (AHA), held in April in Fort Smith, brought a lot of honors to the Butler Center and its staff and projects. EOA editor Guy Lancaster's book Bullets and Fire: Lynching and Authority in Arkansas, 1840–1950 won the John W. Graves Award for best book on race relations. The Butler eBanner, edited by EOA assistant editor Ali Welky and designed by EOA media editor Mike Keckhaver, won the Walter L. Brown Award for Best Newsletter. The Walter L. Brown Award for Best County or Local Journal went to the Pulaski County Historical Society's Pulaski County Historical Review, edited by the Butler Center's Bob Razer. EOA staff historian Mike Polston accepted an award of merit for Cabot Public Schools' Arkansas Great War Letters Project, an effort he directs. The Butler Center's Brian Robertson was elected to the AHA's board of trustees.

Finally, it was reported in June in the Arkansas Democrat-Gazette that Mike Polston won a prize from the Arkansas Press Association for Best Freelance Writing for a larger weekly for his piece "Historian Recalls Lynchings," which appeared in The Leader of Jacksonville.

Guy Lancaster (second from left) receiving the Graves award from (left to right) Andre Guerrero, AHA president Mark Christ, and John W. Graves.

Cont. from Events, p. 1

music. These musicians explore country, blues, swing, and pop music, performing songs by a variety of artists, including Jimmy Driftwood, Grandpa Jones, Merle Travis, Bob Wills, Bill Monroe, Nat King Cole, Stevie Wonder, Antonio Carlos Jobim, Robert Johnson, and the Beatles.

Fri., Sept. 28, 7:00 p.m.

CALS Ron Robinson Theater

"Gershwin: Remembrance and Discovery with Richard Glazier": This multimedia concert features pianist, raconteur, and cultural historian Richard Glazier playing rare Gershwin arrangements. It is sponsored by Arkansas Literary Festival, Arkansas Sounds, the UAMS Department of Medical Humanities & Bioethics, and the Society for the History of Medicine and the Health Professions. Tickets are free but must be reserved on a first-come, first-served basis through www.cals.org

Friday, Oct. 12, 7:00 p.m.

CALS Ron Robinson Theater

George Takei's Allegiance: The Broadway
Musical on the Big Screen—FREE. Inspired by the true-life experience of its star George Takei (Star Trek, Heroes) in the Rohwer
Relocation Center in Arkansas, the Broadway film of Allegiance tells the story of one family's extraordinary journey in a troubling time for a nation plunged into war by the events of Pearl Harbor. Also features Broadway stars Telly

Leung (Godspell, Glee) and Tony Award®-winner Lea Salonga (Miss Saigon, Mulan).

ARKANSAS SOUNDS MUSIC SERIES

Sounds in the Stacks

Tues., Aug. 14, 6:30 p.m.

CALS Fletcher Library—FREE Brian Nahlen, solo guitar & vocals

Thurs., Sept. 6, 6:30 p.m.

CALS Maumelle Library—FREE

Lee Street Lyrical featuring Casey Penn & Buddy Case (acoustic singer-songwriter duo)

Thurs., Oct. 18, 6:30 p.m.

CALS Williams Library—FREE

Tonya Leeks (soulful jazz saxophone & vocals)

Other events:

Tues., Oct. 2

CALS Ron Robinson Theater

Screening of The Exorcist: The Version You've Never Seen. Signing 5:00–6:00; brief Q&A and talk before the movie at 6:00; movie starts at 6:30. $5 for Q&A in the theater and movie ticket only; signing is free. Butler Center Books author and stuntwoman Ann Miles, who performed the famous "spiderwalk" stunt in the extended cut of the movie, will be on hand to answer questions and sign copies of her book Spiderwalk: The High Life and Daring Stunts of a Small-town Girl from Arkansas (Butler Center Books, 2018).

Wed., Oct. 10, noon to 1 p.m.

CALS Ron Robinson Theater

"Save the River Parks: A 25-Year Anniversary Retrospective and Celebration of the Landmark 1992 Campaign." A panel discussion will be led by campaign director Ben Combs to tell the story of the legal challenge and 1991–92 election campaign that prevented massive highway development in the Riverdale area and led to support for initiatives including the Big Dam Bridge, Two Rivers Bridge, and other public parks and trails. There will also be an exhibition of photos, clippings, and campaign materials. Co-sponsored by the Clinton School of Public Service.

Thurs., Oct. 11, 6:30 p.m.

CALS Main Library Darragh Center

A Prized Evening, honoring winners of the Porter Prize and Worthen Prize. The 2018 Porter Prize goes to Tyrone Jaeger, an English/Creative Writing professor at Hendrix College, and the Worthen Prize goes to Mildred D. Gleason for her book Dardanelle and the Bottoms: Environment, Agriculture, and Economy in an Arkansas River Community, 1819–1970 (UA Press, 2017).

BUTLER CENTER DONORS

Monetary Donations:

Anonymous Charles & Chris Feild Laura Sandage Harden, Sebastopol, CA

Shirley Schuette David Stricklin & Sally Browder,

in support of the Betty Rice Art
Conservation Fund

Glenn Whaley
In support of the Legacy of Brewers exhibition:

Afton Historical Society Press, Inver

Grove Heights, MN
Nadine & Loy Aikman
Russ Aikman, Dallas, TX
Carol & Grimsley Graham
Larry Graham & Cindy Steele
David & Joey Halinski, Vicksburg, MS
Sherry L. Lewis, Kenai, AK
Sarah Peet Renner, Minneapolis, MN
Texas Art Collectors Organization, Dallas, TX
Gaines & Bonnie Williamson

In support of Arkansas Sounds: Arkansas Record-CD Exchange John Miller George West & Starr Mitchell Windstream

Materials Donations:

Bill Adams
Sarah Anderson
Terry Black
Ron Copeland
B. G. Cremeen
Stephen Grandon
Marcella Grimmett
Jeffrey Heeter

Jerry Henry
Mike Mallory
James McHaney
Brian Mitchell
Mike Nichols
Julia Norrell, Victoria, VA
Rick Scott
Jerry Senn
Harding Stedler
David Stricklin & Sally Browder
Curtis Watson
Leah Wilkinson
Bill Worthen

THE ENCYCLOPEDIA OF ARKANSAS HISTORY & CULTURE

wanted: Authors and media

We need entries, photographs, documents, videos, maps, and audio clips to help make the EOA the most comprehensive and engaging resource on Arkansas history.

Entries Needing Media (photographs, etc.):

Amagon (Jackson County)
Pernella Anderson (1903–1980)
Antimony Mining
Antoine River

Arkansas Shakespeare Theatre Arkansas Synodical College David Auburn (1969–) Ballet Arkansas

Sylvanus Blackburn (1809–1890)

Virgil Tracy Blossom (1906–1965) Bonanza (Sebastian County)

Bracero Program
Bradley Bunch (1818–1894)

Briarcliff (Baxter County)
Cabotfest

Caddo Valley (Clark County)
Camden Army Air Field

Cave Springs (Benton County)
John Cecil (1822–1884)

Central City (Sebastian County)
Choctaw Freight Terminal

Clarence Byrle Craft (1921–2002) Lorraine Albert Cranford (1918–2004)

Lorraine Albert Cranford (1918–2 Current River

> Denton (Lawrence County) Ivan Denton (1927–2013)

Diamond City (Boone County)

Dimension Stone Mining

Dyer (Crawford County)

Ecclesia College

Fly-fishing

Fourche River Fulbright Industries

Gangster Museum of America
Gilmore (Crittenden County)

Goodwill Industries of Arkansas Goshen (Washington County) Grannis (Polk County)

Grannis (Polk County)

Paul Greenberg (1937–)

Greers Ferry (Cleburne County) Isaac Scott Hathaway (1872–1967)

Hopefield (Crittenden County)

Bobby James Hutton (1950–1968)

L'Anguille River

Lead Hill (Boone County)
Julius Lester (1939–2018)

David Levering Lewis (1936–)

Herbert Littleton (1930–1951)

Mabelvale (Pulaski County)

Massard Prairie

Ralphie May (1972–2017) Jim McKrell (1937–)

Mechanics' Institute of Little Rock
Mercury Mining

Mitchellville (Desha County)

Montrose (Ashley County)

Benjamin Edward (Ben) Murphy (1942-)

Norphlet (Union County) Northern Snakehead

Oxford (Izard County)

Palestine (St. Francis County)

Jimmy Dale "Red" Parker (1931–2016)

William Pickens (1881–1954)
Rodeo of the Ozarks

Salesville (Baxter County)

St. Francis (Clay County)

William LeVan Sherrill (1894-1959)

James Lamar Stone (1922–2012)

Strong (Union County)

Summit (Marion County)

Ruth Harris Thomas (1900–1973)

William Thomas (1923–1945)
Thompson-Robbins Air Field

Thornton (Calhoun County)

Tripoli Mining

William "Sonny" Walker (1933-2016)

Henry Wheeler (1841–1904)

John Garrett Whiteside (1885–1947)

Wilton (Little River County)
Wittsburg (Cross County)

If you have photos or other media, please contact Mike Keckhaver at <a href="mailto:mkeckhaver@mkec

Entries Needing Authors:

Am Olam Colony

Amendment 75 (a.k.a. Conservation Sales Tax)

Arkansas Brewing Co.

Arkansas Whistleblower Act

Aromatique

Clash of the Ozarks [Television Series]

V. L. Cox

Dixie Café

Ferncliff Camp and Conference Center

Fort Smith Sedition Trial of 1988

Frank W. Gibb

Charles Jacobson

Pancho's [Restaurant]

Ponca Bible Camp

Kenna Ruth Rothhammer

David Solomon

Richard Thalheimer

TheatreSquared

Transit Strike of 1955

If you would like to write one of these entries, please contact Guy Lancaster at glancaster@encyclopediaofarkansas.net

Cont. from Books, p. 7

rael for nearly forty years, was a trained social worker as well as a rabbi, and his career as a dynamic religious and community leader in Little Rock spanned the traumas of the Great Depression, World War II and the Holocaust, and the social and racial struggles of the 1950s and 1960s.

Just and Righteous Causes: Rabbi Ira Sanders and the Fight for Racial and Social Justice in Arkansas, 1926–1963—offering a complete biographical study of this bold social-activist rabbi—examines how Sanders expertly navigated the intersections of race, religion, and gender to advocate for a more just society. It joins a growing body of literature about the lives and histories of southern rabbis, deftly balancing scholarly and narrative tones to provide a personal look into the complicated position of the southern rabbi and the Jewish community throughout the political struggles of the twentieth-century South.

For more information, visit UA Press.

The mission of the Central Arkansas Library System Foundation is to provide support for educational and cultural programming for the patrons, communities, and neighborhoods Central Arkansas Library System being served by the Central Arkansas Library System (CALS) and its branches, including the Butler Center. Please go to cals.org to make a donation.
FOUNDATION

Inside Our eCollections

This feature of our Butler eBanner invites readers to click their way into our many and varied digital resources.

$\equiv A CITY OF =$

Beautiful Homes, Schools, Colleges, Churches and Great Business Enterprises. Capital City and Metropolis of the State. Railroad Center

Arkansas, a State of Wonderful Resources

STLED upon a spur of the Pettl Jean Mountains at an elevation of about 300 feet above tide water, the Arkunsus River winding gracefully about it, offset by a majestic bull against which the sunbannas play with vivid light and studow effect, this "City of Rosess" capital and huj of the State, is 80 more heautful than picture-spec.

With a population approaching 50,000, covering an area of twelve square miles slaty-two miles of improved streets, commerce aggregating more than $20,000,000, 1,500 business houses, twenty-seven newspapers and periodicals, twelve banks, railroads running in seven different directions and river transportation, Little Rock in no small pubble in again of its name. A cotton maket that is reported daily on the besiletins of New York and New Orients exchanges, showing total receipids of $9.695.253 in 1991, gives Little Rock rank mines; the first is this industry. There are five large compresses located here, each flaving an immense storage capacity with perfect protection, together with rank and ond river transportation, give snuple facilities for handling all cotton that is marketed in this city.

Lattle Rock is the largest producer of oil from cottom is the world, there being five cottom seed oil mills turning out silskinds of cottom seed protects. Buring the rear 1901, there were hipped 1,055 cars of cotton seed meal; 558 cars of high, 425 cars meal; 558 cars of high, 425 cars ver the previous session. Corn receipts for the same year garwasted 2.191.200 busbels an increase of 125.000. The cespia of cats were 601.000, an increase of 181,000; of wheat 543.400, an increase of 209,400 busbels.

Skeltered as it is by the Bouton Mountains, the mean annual temperature, as given by government weathor reports, shown Little Rock to vary only two degrees from Los Angeles. This gives market gardeners advantage of placing their products on the St. Louta and Kannas City markets four or six weeks earlier than Northern crops This industry is one of the most profile in the State Potatoes are shipped from this point early in June to all points North, for which the growers doubte the profile realized by Northern estilivators. As late as January there

NEW MILLION DOLLAR STATE CAPITOL.

hunhels of the second crup. These are comfidered by both Northern and Southern growers to be superior for seed Evenance of climate, character of cell and many natural advantages afforded to all branches of horticulture in this vicinity gives Little Rock a wide regulation for superior quality of fruits and vogelables of all kinds. Arkansas peaches have standard value for size and rich news of flavor, while apples grown in the highlands are known as the finest in the word. Lember is perhaps second in commercial value, there being no less than twenty varieties of valuable would found throughout the State, and the large number of saw mills located along the various libes of railroads are doing a thriving bostness. There are a great many mann facturing enterprises located here, but many more are needed to meet the demand of increasing population and developments. Manufacturing advantages here are unsurpassed, and every inducement is offered for the investment of capital. Rich deposits of useful metals, a loss list of valuable woods and raw material for meanufacture adjacent to an inexhaustible supply of coal and limit less water power are a few of the advantages. Arkansa offers to the farmer and stocking runser, cleap linds with productive soil adapted to an endiest variety of products and extensive stock range. To the housesocker line climate, excellent water good health, first-cleas, market school and church privileges to the highest character and agree able neighbors. Little Rock is if great wholesale center, therebeing a large number of wases also houses located here including five immense wholesale for crey houses, two of the larges wholesale dry goods houses if the South, the largest wholesale stationers house south of St. Louis, a house wholesaling millinery, hats and cape, being one of the largest in the country several jarge hardware house and through the entire last of wholesale irms there are limited irms there are limited.

meme houses wholesaling implements, machiners for every purpose, carriages, wagons, drugs, liquors, candles, tobarco and cipars, etc. and 280 travelling salesamen have beaubquarters in Little Rock. There are twelve banks under the management of able financiers, and having capital and farifitles for the perfect accommodation of all demands present and to come. The bank carriags for 1901 show a fotal of $34.808.281.45, as increase of more than 21 see cent over the previous year and the clearings

The modern technique of digitization can lead us back in time—in this case, to the Little Rock of more than a hundred years ago.

Part of the Quapaw Quarter Association records, this fully digitized souvenir booklet from 1902–1903 contains general information about the city of Little Rock, including descriptions and photographs of homes, schools, colleges, and businesses located in Little Rock at this time. It even features the "million-dollar state capitol," then under construction. (As stated in the Arkansas State Capitol entry on the EOA: Convict crews supervised by experienced builder and Capitol Commissioner George Donaghey began work in July 1899. Despite some delays, the foundation was essentially complete by late October 1900, and the cornerstone was laid on November 27, 1900; more here.)

Interestingly, page 21 has this description of the Fletcher Coffee and Spice Company, which moved a few blocks to what is now the Roberts Library, home of the Butler Center, in 1909:

THE FLETCHER COFFEE AND SPICE CO.—Importers and Roasters of High Grade Coffees, Teas and Spices. Manufacturers and Jobbers of Grocers' Sundries. No. 219. East Markham Street. This is one of the most important enterprises in Little Rock and carries on a wonderful business. The coffee roasting plant in the rear, run by electric power, is the only roaster in the State, and the manager in charge of the plant has had twenty-two years experience and perfect blending and roasting of coffees is assured.

The entire booklet, recently digitized by the staff members in the Butler Center's Research Services division, can be found online here.